Color Important to Our Comfort, Health To Our Way of Life

CHICAGO — The importance of color in our lives is something which most of us take dimly appreciate. It can affect our comfort, our health, and our finances. In some cases it may even be the deciding factor between life and death.

The United States Army withdrew its regulation navy blue shirts in malarial districts of Europe when it learned that malaria-bearing mosquitoes alighted most on dark blue, red, and brown and were likely to avoid yellow, orange, and white. In South Africa it was found that pink and yellow mosquito curtains did not harbor the insects.

Through control of light and color, chickens will lay more eggs, cows will give more milk, goats will give milk when they otherwise wouldn't, and brown weasels will turn to white ermine in mid-summer instead of mid-winter.

Traps for Japanese beetles are painted yellow because this color seems to tempt them fatally. Barnacles will avoid light-colored ship bottoms but cling by the ton to dark hulls.

Science has been able to prove that human beings have a decided muscular reaction to color and light. Red colors and bright illumination tend to increase muscle tension and speed up the pulse and breathing. Blue colors and dim lighting relax the muscles, slow down the heart and lungs.

Early Gals Could Turn Eyes of Male

SANTA BARBARA—If all else fails and you still can't get your man, ladies, try inserting crackling paper in your shoes to attract male attention.

Don't laugh—Arab women in 708 A. D. shuffled about snapping, crackling, and popping with the same amorous intent, and they apparently got results.

This rather unique method of allurement is only one of the curious practices associated with early paper-making brought to light by Dr. Thomas S. Weir, assistant professor of industrial arts at University of California, Santa Barbara College. He just completed two years in Lebanon as a consultant in technical education for the U. S. Foreign Operations Administration.

Long before papyrus became commercially remunerative—way back in 1700 B.C.—the ancients were inscribing their views on clay, ceramics, flat stones, skins, palm stalks, the bark of trees, and flat bones, according to Dr. Weir. But by 926 A.D. captured Chinese papermakers had taught the Middle East peoples the art of making fine paper. It subsequently spread throughout Europe.

The Arabs used paper not only for writing and as "uncle here," but as "judgment shirts" inscribed with the writer's crime, as hat stiffeners, kites, and needlework patterns.

Study Tells Increases in Plant Capacity

An indication of the growth of America's productive resources in recent years as the result of record investment in new plant and equipment by major industries is provided by data compiled by the National Industrial Conference Board from information collected by the Federal Reserve System.

These figures show that aluminum has had by far the biggest growth in annual capacity of the selected industries studied, with an increase of 108 per cent in the 1952-57 period. The second biggest increase, amounting to just under 36 per cent in the five-year period, was in synthetic fibers. Other increases in annual capacity between 1952 and 1957 were cement, 27 per cent; paperboard, 26.8; steel ingots and petroleum products, 22.9 each; paper, 18.3; and pig iron, 17.6.

Britain Moves To Save Ruins of Hadrian's Wall

WASHINGTON—Remains of a massive stone wall built by Roman soldiers 1,800 years ago still stretch like a belt across the north of England.

To preserve Hadrian's Wall, as it is best known, a movement is under way in England to put the historic barrier under stewardship of the British Government. Storms, sheep, and the ravages of builders already reduced much of the structure to ruins.

Wending across the moorlands of Northumberland and Cumberland, Hadrian's Wall extends 73.5 miles from Bowness on Solway Firth to Wallsend on the Tyne River.

Far-Away Frogs

CASABLANCA—A local frog raiser just can't keep his products at home. More than 7,000 frogs, valued at more than $800 disappeared recently, less than a year after 5,000 frogs disappeared from the same pond.

Homemakers Items

Good curtain fabrics are an investment.

VPI home economists say curtain rods and fixtures should fit the window and give adequate support. The same rule applies to curtain rings, drapery pins, tie-backs, weights, and other accessories.

On the other hand, improper hardware can destroy the appearance of curtains that are perfectly suitable. Curtains that are permanently pressed will be an annoyance if the curtain rods are not adjustable to the window.

Curtain hardware can be done with adjustable curtain rods. For most windows, flat or round rods of glass curtains are adequate. Decorative rods can be bought in many designs, such as curved rods for bay windows. Tie-backs for draw curtains can be purchased or made at home.

Cafe curtains are popular this year. They are widely used in the kitchen, bathroom, and bedroom. They can be made to cover only the lower part of a window, two-thirds of the window, or are often used as glass curtains. Draw curtains to provide privacy screen the light, thus eliminating the need for drawing the glass curtains during the day.

Ranch-type homes usually have large picture windows have created a problem of too much light: weight, less expensive, and easily maintained fabrics are available. Fabrics are semi-opaque to provide privacy at night, and to cut down the glare during the day while still admitting some light.

The fiberglass semi-sheer fabrics require less care than other fabrics. They can be washed in a washing machine in 20 minutes. Be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions for washing and drying. Their care, however, is important. Fabrics washed often even when not visibly soiled become dingy and almost impossible to restore. Some washing fiberglass curtains by hand and wringing or you may be disappointed. Let them drip dry or smooth out the hems and hang them while damp.

MASSEY - WOODY

The wedding of Miss Hilda Mae Woody, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Woody, of Appomattox, to Mr. Sterling William Massey Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Massey of Pamplin, took place Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, at Longacre, the home of Mrs. Frank Charles Dresser.

The Rev. Richard A. Bergdoll performed the double ring ceremony against a background of magnolia, white carnations and candelabras.

Miss Peggy Godsey provided the traditional wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, William Edward Woody. Mrs. William Carlton Thomas served as her sister's matron of honor and Leslie Edgar Nash was the best man for the groom.

The bride wore a dark gray tweed suit with matching accessories and carried a white prayer book, topped with cymbotium orchids. The matron of honor wore a Navy blue dress with white accessories and her corsage was of white carnations.

Mrs. Dresser entertained at a reception following the ceremony for the bridal party and guests. The dining room was decorated in tones of yellow and green and high and low arrangements of early spring flowers and greens.

On their return from a wedding trip, the couple will make their home in Appomattox.

ASK VOLUNTEERS FOR THE LOCAL CANCER CRUSADE

A call for volunteers was sounded today for the 1958 Cancer Crusade by Richard L. Wingfield, local Postmaster, and chairman of the American Cancer Society's drive in Appomattox County. A most important meeting of volunteer workers and all those interested in the Cancer program will be held on Tuesday, April 8, in the Appomattox High School cafeteria. At this time, Miss Gerleen Jones, field representative of the Virginia Division of the American Cancer Society, will be present to explain the work.

Mr. Wingfield stressed that this meeting is open to the public and added, "The American Cancer Society is proud to announce that we have now reached an all-time high of 2,000,000 public spirited volunteers in all parts of the country who are dedicated to the defeat of cancer. I am happy to add that a substantial number of those who have served in past years here in Appomattox have already pledged to serve again this year, but I want to appeal for many more additional volunteers to help us with the big job we must do throughout April, Cancer Control Month."

"It is a fact that cancer strikes in two out of three American homes. So behind two out of three doors that open to our volunteers during the month of April, there may be a life to save that might otherwise be lost."
